

Edge Coffee Table

Designed by Simon Legald for Normann Copenhagen

An uncomplicated design with a focus on travertine

Normann Copenhagen launches a new coffee table, designed with minimalistic design principles for a timeless, yet captivating expression. The table is crafted from 100% travertine, an interesting and timeless material distinguished by its extraordinary structure and unique patterns.

To minimize unnecessary waste, Edge is designed to utilize the way the travertine material is sourced. The natural stone is quarried from a travertine quarry, then cut into slabs of different sizes. Edge Coffee Table consists entirely of square travertine slabs in varying sizes, assembled in a simple, geometric construction. This way, the different slabs are used to make the most of the material.

The geometric construction of the table casts intriguing shadows and infuses the design with a dynamic expression. Edge is characterized by minimalistic, clean lines, a complementary contrast to the dynamic play and organic look of the natural material. In total, a simple design that shines light on the natural travertine stone and possesses an extraordinary ability to fit seamlessly into any interior.
