INTRODUCING REB LAMP: A PLAYFUL AND SCULPTURAL TAKE ON CONTEMPORARY LIGHTING DESIGN

Normann Copenhagen proudly unveils the Reb Lamp, a sculptural and versatile pendant light designed by German designer Verena Hennig of AKTTEM. Known for her human-centered and innovative approach to design, Hennig brings her tactile, playful and functional aesthetic to this distinctive lighting concept.

The Reb Lamp reimagines the boundaries of pendant lighting design with either five or eight lighting modules encased in delicate mesh fabric. Designed for flexible configuration, Reb encourages users to creatively craft bespoke arrangements that adapt to any spatial setting and lighting need. Whether used as a cascading curtain of light, an abstract chandelier, or a minimalist room divider, Reb Lamp invites personal expression and creative exploration. Its versatility is further enhanced by a metal tube at the base, which doubles as a discreet dimming function, offering three light intensity levels to adjust the ambiance according to mood.

Hennig's inspiration stemmed from the idea of drawing illuminated lines in a room, creating visual interest through an interplay of light and form. The design embraces a clear and refined color palette, ensuring that it complements a variety of interiors, from modern living rooms to sophisticated hospitality settings.

“The Reb Lamp perfectly reflects Normann Copenhagen’s philosophy of clean lines, playful details, and refined craftsmanship,” says Verena Hennig. “Its adaptability and unique tactile qualities make it an ideal choice for spaces that seek both function and character.”

With its contemporary aesthetic and thoughtful material choices, the Reb Lamp exemplifies Normann Copenhagen’s commitment to innovative design that enhances everyday life.
